Cancel used in River Edge, NH for the bicentennial of von Steuben's death. Paul Hennefeld designed the postmark portion of the cancel. The drawing of the Steuben House was done by Claire Throll of New Jersey.

On September 17, 1930 Baron Friedrich Wilhelm von Steuben was honored with the release of the two cent red (Scott 689) for his participation in the American Revolution.

Friedrich von Steuben (1730-1794)

From a column written by Francis Ferguson, Jr. in Lambda Philatelic Journal, 2001, Vol 20, No1.

Baron von Steuben was born into a military family in the Prussian town of Magdeburg on September 17, 1730. There is little recorded information of his early life; he was educated at a Jesuit school in Breslau and entered the service of the king and army at the age of sixteen. Steuben rose quickly in rank, paying very close attention to the study of "the arts of war".

During this period of his life, he was noticed by Frederick the Great. King Frederick is widely considered to be one of the greatest military leaders of our times, and to Steuben's immense benefit also homosexual. However, Steuben ran afoul with the clergy for "taking familiarities with young boys, which laws forbid" and was at risk of being prosecuted. This event was the single driving force behind Steuben's search for a more tolerant land.

On December 1, 1777 the Baron von Steuben arrived in Portsmouth, New Hampshire with his male seventeen year old private secretary, Pierre Etienne Duponceau, to whom he was romantically attracted. Steuben quickly became a critical part of George Washington's inner circle of highly regarded individuals. Washington in 1778 recommended the appointment of Steuben as Inspector General, and Congress quickly approved this nomination. This laid the ground work for Steuben to prepare the acclaimed "Regulations for the Order and Discipline of the Troops of the United States", which became a standard of reference for military training for the United States military organization.

Steuben continued to serve Washington, as commander of one of the three divisions of Washington's troops at the pivotal battle of Yorktown. As the Revolutionary War concluded, Steuben continued to provide assistance as he helped Washington to demobilize the army in 1783, and also to plan the defense of the newly freed nation. He was discharged from the military in March of 1784 with honor.

The Gay and Lesbian History on Stamps Journal is published quarterly by Gay and Lesbian History on Stamps (GLHS). GLHS is an affiliate of the American Philatelic Society (APS), Number 205, and a study unit of the American Topical Association (ATA), Number 458.

The objective of GLHS is to promote an interest in the collection, study and dissemination of knowledge of worldwide philatelic material that depicts:

- Notable men and women and their contributions to society for whom historical evidence exists of homosexual or bisexual orientation,
- Mythology, historical events and ideas significant in the history of gay culture,
- Flora and fauna scientifically proven as having prominent homosexual behavior, and

Even though emphasis is placed on the above aspects of stamp collecting, GLHS strongly encourages other philatelic endeavors.

Retirement... Went Astray

By Francis Ferguson

I apologize for being missing in action, but unforeseen events overtook my life. While I did retire as planned on 01.04.24 the events of the following two months did not go as expected. January and February were spent at a lot of doctor appointments all leading up to what was planned to be a stent or two to be placed in my arteries supplying blood flow to the heart. Well, that did not go as planned. On March 4th I was on the operating table for about 2 hours – and the diagnosis was no stents could be placed. Instead, I was stuffed back in my room and told I was not going anywhere – any time soon. March 7th saw a major replumbing job done with a triple bypass being performed (otherwise known as CABG). Successfully. A total of 11 nights in the hospital eating rather questionable food was an adventure I do not want to repeat. But alas, that was not in the cards. Five days after being released to the care of my husband I ended up back in the hospital for three nights after suffering a minor left side stroke. Thankfully the stroke issues have all mostly resolved now. Six months out from surgery I am still in the recovery mode, and do cardio PT almost every day.

After being missing in action for most of March-April-May I have been returning slowly to my philatelic duties. The will to do things -- does not match my endurance level at this time, but it is getting better with each passing day.

Thankfully the summer months in Central Florida do not require me to be outside much as the heat and humidity just drains the energy from me. I can instead spend time with my philatelic projects. I call that a win in my book.

Until next time, be good and practice kindness. Pay it forward.

Collecting stamps started for me when I was young at a time when the U.S. stamp album was a single volume. The collection sat dormant for many years before restarting after retiring.

I find enjoyment in the artistic beauty of stamps, which also seems to mean I have more interest in the colorful stamps of recent decades than in the single-color stamps and complexity of the 19th century.

My collection is mainly United States singles and certain small sheets of interest (strictly my opinion). The collection also includes a sampling of past and present Hawaii stamps. Also, I'm attempting to collect LGBTQIA2s+ stamps of the world, for which GLHS is extremely helpful at providing information. For that, I am grateful.

New stamp shines spotlight on Canadian singer-songwriter Sarah McLachlan

Grammy and JUNO award-winning artist has sold more than 40 million albums worldwide and is known for her philanthropic efforts

Canada Post Press Release September 17, 2024

VANCOUVER – Canada Post issued a new stamp September 17, 2024 honouring singer-songwriter and musician, Sarah McLachlan. Known for her emotional ballads and hauntingly soulful vocals, the award-winning Canadian artist has sold more than 40 million albums worldwide.

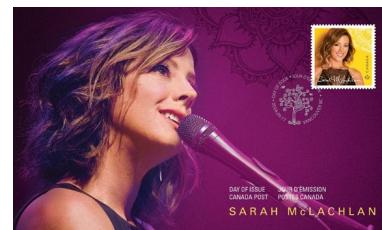

Born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1968, McLachlan was adopted as an infant and received classical training in guitar, piano and voice at an early age. After studying at the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design for one year, she moved to Vancouver, British Columbia, and released her first studio album, Touch (1988), at age 20.

Her second album, Solace (1991), went gold in Canada and earned McLachlan her first two JUNO nominations and first win for Best Video for the single “Into the Fire.” Fumbling Towards Ecstasy – celebrating its 30th anniversary this year with a North American tour – was a hit on its release in Canada and the United States in 1994.

McLachlan has since launched six more studio albums, including the multi-platinum Surfacing (1997), her best-selling album to date. Showcasing her unique fusion of pop and folk with such hits as, “Building a Mystery,” “Sweet Surrender” and “Angel,” the album was a critical and commercial success and won two Grammy Awards and four JUNO Awards.

In 1997, McLachlan founded the exclusively female-fronted Lilith Fair concert tour, which helped bolster careers and raised more than $7 million for local and national charities. She has been a longtime advocate for animal rights and is the founder of the non-profit Sarah McLachlan School of Music, which provides free music education and mentorship to children and youth, among others, facing barriers to access.

McLachlan was appointed an Officer of the Order of Canada (1999), invested into the Order of British Columbia (2001) and received a Governor General's Performing Arts Award for Lifetime Artistic Achievement (Popular Music) (2015). A member of the Canadian Music Hall of Fame (2017), she will be inducted into the Canadian Songwriters Hall of Fame on September 28 of this year.

GLHS editor's note: Although Sarah McLachlan does not identify as LGBTQ, she has a large lesbian following and is a strong advocate for gay and lesbian rights.

adopted as his two “sons”. He died a “bachelor” in 1794, leaving his considerable property to North and Walker.

Germany issued a 100 pfennige stamp commemorating the 200th anniversary of the death of General von Steuben. The stamp was the first class rate for letters sent in Germany and Europe.

1994, Germany, #1642

From September Gay Philatelic Heroes by Paul Hennefeld, Lambda Philatelic Journal, September 2001

Frederick von Steuben was born September 13, 1730. He was military aide to Frederick The Great, and Prince Henry of Prussia. [Frederick & Henry were both homosexual] It is believed that Baron von Steuben had been caught in an uncompromising position with one or several of his soldiers. Steuben fled to the USA to join General George Washington's 'family'. Steuben trained the American troops, and was the author of the 'Military Code of Regulations' handbook. Two soldiers, William North and Ben Walker, were to von Steuben's liking. He legally adopted both men, and they lived together until the general's death, at which time they shared in his estate.

Thomas Anthony "Tomie" dePaola

DePaola was gay. He came out later in his life, telling The New York Times Magazine in 2019 that, for much of his career, "If it became known you were gay, you'd have a big red 'G' on your chest... and schools wouldn't buy your books anymore." (1)

Among his many works, DePaola, who was gay, wrote one of the earliest picture books to feature a boy who could be read as queer and "didn't like to do things that boys are supposed to do." The book was based on his own childhood experiences. (2)

The protagonist of DePaola's 1979 Oliver Button Is a Sissy prefers to draw, dress up, and dance rather than do sports, even though the other boys tease him. Eventually, though, his courage and tap-dancing performance win over his classmates. (2)

Thomas Anthony "Tomie" dePaola was born September 15, 1934 in Meriden, Connecticut, USA. He enjoyed cooking, reading, gardening, traveling, watching movies and shopping. DePaola wrote and illustrated more than 270 children's books over a half century career, earning many awards and recognitions, including the Laura Ingalls Wilder Award (now known as the Children's Literature Legacy Award) for his lasting and substantial contribution to children's literature.

The non-denominated (63¢) stamp is from the cover of Strega Nona, the first of a series and one of his best-known books, first published in 1975. The older woman on the stamp is "Grandma Witch" (Calabria, Italy). She uses magic to cure her neighbors' ills and help with matters of the heart. In the stamp, she is carrying her magic pasta pot.

Tomie dePaola stamp was issued May 5, 2023, at the Currier Museum of Art in Manchester, New Hampshire, USA. The museum holds more than 100 of dePaola's works in their collection <https://currier.org>.

The Currier Museum claims dePaola "had a masterful ability to express complicated emotions through accessible narratives and dynamic illustrations, filled with his warm and lively characters." His work comprised of folktales and legends, informational books, religious and holiday stories, and touching autobiographical tales. Deceptively simple, dePaola's stories contained layers of emotional meaning that appeals to readers of all ages.

DePaola attempted to convey three fundamental truths in all his books: Success depends on hard work, happiness relies on embracing one's true self, and love and kindness underscore all.

DePaola passed on March 30, 2020 in New London, New Hampshire, USA. He was 85. The museum created the Tomie dePaola's Art Education Fund to support art education for young people.

Publisher of Strega Nona is Simon & Schuster Books for Young Readers.

The designer of the Tomie dePaola stamp is postal service art director Derry Noyes. She chose this design as her kids grew up reading the Strega Nona books thus making dePaola a beloved writer in their family. The stamps were printed by Ashton Potter Ltd., of Williamsville, New York, USA, using offset lithography. Microprinting appears somewhere in the design.

Cachet designer: Carol J. Edholm; Mountlake Terrace, Washington, USA. Only six sets of these specific covers were created.

The AFDCS is a volunteer non-profit and non-commercial organization serving the needs of First Day Cover collectors, cachetmakers, and dealers. Founded in 1955, the society has a membership of over 1,100 active first day cover collectors, including many who design and manufacture their own cacheted FDCs.

Cheery, Whimsical Pinback Buttons Stamps Bring Playful Touch to Cards and Letters

USPS Press release August 15, 2024 supplemented with personal photos.

HARTFORD, CT — The Postal Service, in partnership with the American Philatelic Society, held a dedication ceremony for Pinback Buttons stamps today at the Great American Stamp Show. The stamps feature 10 typographic designs by various artists in their unique styles, each with a single word as the central element of the design.

“Long before we had social media, pinback buttons were a common form of self-expression. Even today, nothing replaces the warmth of a handwritten note to friends and family. When you send your next note, you’ll have an upbeat stamp to add an extra personal touch to the envelope,” said Scott English, executive director of the American Philatelic Society.

“One of the bedrocks of our nation is freedom of expression, so it’s no surprise that pinback buttons have enjoyed such enduring popularity,” said Shabani Gambhir, USPS sales intelligence and support vice president. “Whether they convey your politics, champion a cause, simply tell a joke or serve as a souvenir, these small tokens of your thoughts and interests are easily worn and shared with others.”

Other speakers at the ceremony included Greg Breeding, an art director for USPS who designed the stamps. He said, “the idea of working with 10 artists at once felt a little overwhelming. But that turned out to be the best creative decision I made.”

Jennifer Miller, executive director of the American Topical Association, a group for stamp collectors, said, “Like so many of the recent stamp issues, the Pinback Buttons Forever stamps offer a wealth of topics for stamp collectors. These new stamps carry a wonderful nostalgic feel for veteran philatelists and intriguing designs for modern topical collectors.”

Since their first appearance in 1896, pinback buttons have expressed viewpoints, made statements and showcased the interests of those who wear them. Covered in clear celluloid to protect the paper underneath and constructed of stamped metal that was easy to reproduce, the first pinback buttons were more colorful and versatile than the metal buttons and other insignia that preceded them.

The novel medium quickly came into popular use for advertising and political campaigns. For more than 120 years, buttons of various sizes have helped spread ideas and broadcast opinions on a wide variety of topics.

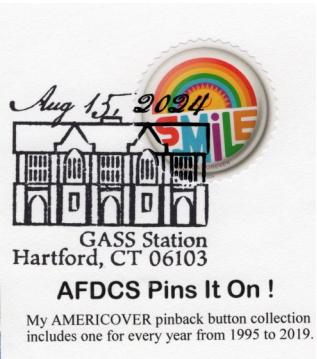

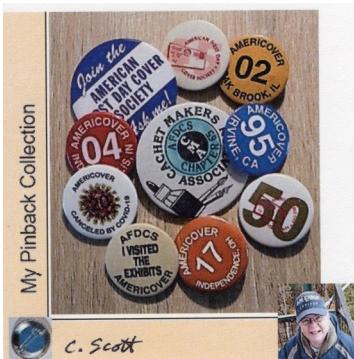

The designs and slogans adorning buttons reflect the era and values of the time in which they were created, like any other piece of pop culture ephemera. In this way, pinback buttons become historical tools providing insight into the moods, sentiments and worldviews of people living in a particular time and place.

The pane of 20 stamps features 10 typographic designs by various artists in their unique styles, each with a single word as the prominent design element.

The round shape of the stamps as well as shadowing and reflection effects give the appearance of three-dimensional pinback buttons. The pane verso features an illustration of a round silver button back with pin fastener repeated 20 times, one for each pinback button shown on the front of the pane.

The versatility of pinback buttons has created endless opportunities for graphic and typographic treatments. Whether to convey a political leaning, tell a joke, champion a social or environmental cause, or simply to serve as a souvenir, these small tokens of one's thoughts and interests are meant to be worn and shared with others.

These pins let others know a person's pronouns. They create a more inclusive, safe, and supportive environment for people in the LGBTQ+ community. Pronoun pins reduce misgendering and normalize sharing your pronouns. BGC LEGACY

"You are making a very strong political and social statement with this exhibit - DO NOT BACK DOWN"

Just returned from the Great American Stamp Show in Hartford, CT - the annual national meeting of our various stamp and postal history collector organizations (American Philatelic Society; American Topical Association; Gay & Lesbian History on Stamps; Sports Philatelist International; and others).

These comments were part of the juried public forum critique and also on the written ballot from my primary respondent - himself a new winner this weekend of the highest lifetime achievement award in our hobby. My exhibit examines the symbol of the Pink Triangle - originally created by the Nazi regime to oppress gay men in the WWII concentration camps - and subsequently reclaimed after Stonewall by our community starting with ACT UP and others. The message and need for activism remain critically important today and for our future. Proud to have also given a seminar session on it during the meetings which generated great discussion.

Gay Postal History:
Barney Frank

The final installment of this series is on another Congressman from the State of Massachusetts. The first two Congressmen were forced to leave public office upon disclosure of their sexual preference. The third Congressman had a different outcome, though his ordeal began much the same as the other two. The fourth, and final Congressman, had a much different chain of events.

The closet was still "home" for Barney Frank while he was a Massachusetts state representative. Unlike others who were gay yet did not acknowledge this fact, he was very supportive of gays and lesbians. In the 1980 elections, he was elected to the US House of Representatives. His district covered the Boston suburban area of Newton and Fall River.

Once in Washington, it appears that Frank began to slowly open the door. His coterie began to grow. Visits to gay bars became more frequent. And, he was still a very strong supporter of gay and lesbian issues. By the mid 80's, most people who knew Barney Frank knew or suspected that he was gay.

1987 was to be an important year for Frank. Gary Hart, who was running for President, was forced to drop out of the race. This was due to Hart's affair with Donna Rice. The press went on a frenzy, delving into politician's private lives. The Governor of Ohio was said to have had three affairs. Reporters then began to question Jesse Jackson on his relationships. Then, Connecticut Representative Stewart McKinney died of AIDS. He was married at the time and the father of five. Upon his death, it was discovered that he had had several gay relationships. It was at McKinney's funeral when Frank decided to publicly acknowledge his being gay. "I don't want to leave the impression that I am embarrassed about my life."

During a May 29, 1987 interview with the Boston Globe, Frank said, "If you ask the direct question: 'Are you gay?', the answer is: Yes. So what? I've said all along that if I was asked by a reporter and I didn't respond it would look like I had something to hide, and I don't think I have anything to hide."

Barney Frank was the first US Congressman to openly acknowledge that he was gay. The others were all forced to make this admission. Frank's coming out marked an important moment in gay history.

Rep. Frank has since been re-elected to Congress. His sixth term began after the 1990 off-year elections. He is currently on several House committees: Banking, Finance, Urban Affairs; Government Operations; Judiciary and The Select Committee on Aging.

The House of Representatives currently has two members known to be gay. The Senate has none. Of the four members covered in this series, it appears that public acceptance is growing. However, both members that were forced from office represented Southern states. Reps. Studds and Frank come from a much more liberal state. One day, all of America will discover that a person's sexual preference does not affect their ability to be public officials.
